Job Opportunity

The Tsì'qi Wellness Worker is responsible for developing and delivering culturally relevant programs for women in the Tl'etinqox Community and Tl'etinqox Members in Williams Lake. This role focuses on promoting wellness by incorporating Tsilhqot'in values, language, life skills, and personalized support for individuals who identify as female and/or Two-Spirit. The successful candidate will work closely with community members to identify their needs and create meaningful programs that foster personal growth, connection, and healing.

Key Responsibilities

- Design and implement women's wellness programs based on Tsilhqot'in culture, values, and language.
- Facilitate workshops and activities that focus on life skills, cultural teachings, on-the-land teachings, and personal development.
- Work collaboratively with Elders, Knowledge Keepers, and community leaders to incorporate traditional practices into programs.
- Ensure programs align with the 5-year Community Development Plan, identifying and addressing gaps.
- Set up for programs and handle cleanup afterward.
- Assist with activities at cultural camps and community events.
- Build strong relationships with women to encourage participation and engagement.
- Plan programs that include life skills and on-the-land healing to help participants prepare for their roles as mothers, aunts, grandmothers, and Elders.
- Act as a liaison between members and available community resources.
- Offer a safe and supportive environment for women to discuss challenges and seek guidance.
- Maintain accurate records of program activities, participation, and outcomes.

- Work with the Knowledge Keeper to ensure Tsilhqot'in teachings are prioritized

Qualifications & Skills

- Experience working with Indigenous communities and individuals.
- Training in Life Skills is an asset but not required.
- Knowledge of Tsilhqot'in culture, language, and values (or willingness to learn).
- Experience in programming or wellness-related roles.
- Organizational and planning skills.
- Ability to work independently and as part of a team.
- Proficiency in Microsoft Word, Canva and basic office applications.
- Ability to assess community needs and develop targeted programs.
- Communication and interpersonal skills.
- Ability to handle sensitive and confidential information with professionalism.

About the Benefits

- Comprehensive employee health benefits after 3 months.
- Employer matching pension
- Vacation starting at 2 weeks vacation + additional 2 weeks paid time off at Christmas + Cultural leave for Tl'etinqox community traditional practices and ceremonies.
- Family-oriented work environment
- Access to a company vehicle may be available for work-related travel, as required.

Working Conditions

- Work will be conducted in both the Tl'etinqox Community and Williams Lake.
- Evening and weekend work will be required as needed.
- Travel will be required when necessary.
- Set up and take down of program space.
